I met Sam Bahadur's daughter Maya multiple times to understand how he walked and spoke. We were shooting in Delhi, and I have never been so nervous in front of the camera. Sam Bahadur's daughter was watching the shot behind the camera. I was scared because I knew I would not dare to ask whether I did it right or not. I just knew that if in her eyes I saw that she did not like it, then my confidence would be shattered, and more than half the film was left to be shot. But, I was very happy to see that she had tears in her eyes after watching the shot and that boosted my confidence." He adds, "For me, the biggest award is when a military film is approved by the military and they call out your performance." Netflix's 'The Great Indian Kapil Show' continues to be a beacon of laughter and joy for audiences across the nation, and the upcoming episode featuring Vicky and Sunny Kaushal promises to be nothing short of spectacular.
