Challenge to Dr. Rajesh Verma's appointment as VC of Rani Durgavati University

Jabalpur: The appointment of Dr. Rajesh Verma as the Vice Chancellor of Rani Durgavati University (RDU) has been challenged in the High Court. The petition disputes both his original appointment as a professor and his subsequent appointment as Vice Chancellor. A single bench of Justice Vivek Jain issued notices to the state government, Madhya Pradesh Public Service Commission (MPPSC), the Higher Education Department, and Dr. Verma, directing them to respond to the petition.

The case was filed by Sachin Rajak and Abhishek Tiwari, district president and member of the Indian National Student Organization (INSO), Jabalpur, respectively. They have alleged that Dr. Verma's appointment as a professor was made in violation of the rules. According to UGC guidelines, a candidate must have a Ph.D. degree followed by a minimum of 10 years of teaching experience to be eligible for the position of professor. Advocate Utkarsh Agrawal, representing the petitioners, argued that Dr. Verma received his Ph.D. on November 25, 2008, and the MPPSC advertised the professor's position on January 19, 2009. The application deadline was February 20, 2009, by which time the required 10 years of teaching experience should have been completed.

The petitioners pointed out that in a previous case involving Sangeeta Barukar, MPPSC had declared that 10 years of teaching experience post-Ph.D. was essential for appointment to the professor's post, which was not the case with Dr. Verma.

The petitioners argue that if Dr. Verma's initial appointment as a professor was unlawful, his subsequent appointment as Vice Chancellor cannot be considered legal.
