

Nakshatra or Stars in Astrology

These celestial luminaries make all the difference in astrological calculations. Initially, the zodiac was grouped in 12 Rashis for convenience, however the ancient seers have further subdivided the heavens into 27 Nakshatras or star constellations for the call of precession. These constellations or the Nakshatras emerged as one of the most important components in Astrology.

Vedic astrology identifies each constellation with a star. The 360 degree division of the sky is therefore further divided into 27 subdivisions of 13.20 degrees identified with 27 stars. Each of these Nakshatras are further subdivided into four Padas or quarters of 3 degrees and 20 minutes.

Therefore the first Rashi, Mesha, which has 30 degrees, contains the entire 4 Padas (13:20') of the 1st star constellation Ashwini, the entire 4 Padas (13:20') of the 2nd star constellation Bharani and the 1st Pada (3:20') of the third star constellation Kritika. In this manner, each Rashi comprises of 9 Padas. Some schools of astrology also consider 28 divisions with an additional star called Abhijit. However, for all practical purposes only 27 stars starting from Ashwini are considered.

Weekly Horoscope: Nov. 23rd to 29th Nov. 2025

It's Thanksgiving week, and there's a lot going on in the sky. Love planet Venus meets up with Mercury retrograde on the 24th bringing run-ins with ex-lovers at the hometown bar crawl. Venus then connects with Jupiter and Saturn on the 26th, bringing abundance and deep conversation to the Thanksgiving table. Expect some tears of both grief and joy. To complete this love story, Venus faces off with shock-and-awe planet Uranus on the 29th, bringing exciting changes in your love life, or another surprise encounter.

It's the final week of Mercury retrograde, and you're feeling both scattered and reflective. Whether you're going deep in therapy, writing your memoir or refinancing loans, you might be too overwhelmed to acknowledge your progress. If you're deep in stress mode, take a moment to do something kind for someone you love.

Whether starting a new job or training for a race, you've been very busy trying to regulate yourself. This week, especially on the 26th, brings a rare opportunity to relax and appreciate what you've built so far. If the training plan needs to be adjusted, you can do so with confidence next week. For now, take it slow, take a break, and try to do less.

Everything has been a bit topsy-turvy with your relationships over the last few weeks, and things get even weirder when Venus faces off with change-maker Uranus on the 29th. You're not someone who enjoys change, but right now, you have no choice but to embrace it. As Mercury retrograde ends, you're also preparing to sign a contract or seal a deal.

The trip you're taking this week will probably change your life. But first: you have to get through the chaos of the airport. This is not the trip to throw everything into a suitcase at 2 am the night before you leave. Make a detailed packing list! If you're bringing a new partner home for the holidays, trust that the conversation will flow after the 26th, even if you get off to an awkward start.

You're already in holiday mode, but a bunch of last-minute assignments at work derail your plans to coast. Mercury retrograde finally ends on the 29th but until then, you're dealing with miscommunications and chaos, especially with coworkers or your dog sitter. Treating yourself will cheer you up, but try to do so on a budget.

Some of your best ideas might come to you in a dream this week. Struggling to figure out the timing for Thanksgiving cooking? Take a nap. Worried about your family getting along with your partner at the dinner table? Take a break. Communication wires will be crossed, but make sure you're writing down all your inspired thoughts to revisit at a later date.

Mercury retrograde's final week puts you in touch with an old fling at the hometown reunion or Friendsgiving festivities. Notice how unbothered you are, and how that reflects your growth in confidence over the last six months. As Saturn retrograde ends on the 27th, you finally clear a roadblock toward a major goal. Everything is working out for you.

As much as it feels easier to do it all yourself, who's been willing to help you out? Connections you've made over the past few weeks come through with recommendations and job opportunities this week, even if progress (and communication) is still slow. You've been challenged to refine your daily schedule over the last few years and this week, you might have to cut something out to make room for something better.

Whether you're off from work or have a hot date, this week is a lot of fun. But it also brings some tough news as Saturn stations direct on the 27th. The last few years have brought so many compromises and negotiations, and this is yet another reminder that it's not all in your control. Balance it out with having a drink and a laugh with someone cute.

Since March 2023, you've done a lot of work to get real about your money. And this week, you have one more test. Do you splurge on a bunch of Black Friday deals? Or do you save for future investments? You probably already know the answer, but the temptation is there. This week also brings progress on a project that has you feeling more confident in your leadership abilities.

It's the final week of Mercury retrograde, and you're feeling particularly scattered and all over the place. Trains are delayed, texts are being left on read, and important emails are going to spam. To top it all off, an argument with your partner on the 27th pokes at a conflict you thought was already resolved. Things slowly get back on track after Mercury stations direct on the 29th.

If you're staying close to home for the holidays, this week goes relatively smooth. You just might find yourself absorbed in a book or down a research rabbit-hole when you're supposed to be prepping a pie to bring to your sister's. If you've got long-distance travel on the docket though, get to the airport early and prepare for some delays.
